New England World Selections

The Bi-Monthly Catalog of New England's Ancient & World Coin Division

Happy Holidays from New England's World Coin Division

This is the last issue of New England World Selections for 1980, and we'd like to take this opportunity to wish you all Happy Holidays. Since the first issue of this catalog (published in May of this year), New England World Selections' readership has grown tremendously. In part, this has been due to the booming popularity of ancient and world coinage in today's numismatic marketplace. But our growth has also resulted from your patronage, and from the many new readers you have brought us by recommending New England to friends and fellow hobbyists. For this, we are truly grateful, and we look forward to furnishing you with the industry's finest ancient and world numismatic services throughout the coming new year.

As a special holiday treat, this month's New England World Selections features many new coin offerings from our latest buying trip in Europe. In addition, we present the second part of our History of English Coinage, along with a glossary of English numismatic terms. Additional articles on other areas of world coinage will appear in future issues of New England World Selections.

If you'd like your own copy of Inventory Selections (featuring the largest monthly offering of high-quality U.S. rare coinage in the world), simply send $1 for a sample, or $10 for a 12-issue subscription, to: New England Rare Coin Galleries, P.O. Box 1776, Boston, Massachusetts 02105.

For those of you who are new to New England World Selections, we invite you to scan our back page. There, you will find a basic introduction to the services and standards of quality that have made New England Rare Coin Galleries the largest rare coin dealer in the world today. We look forward to putting those services and that quality to work for you very soon.

The Coinage of England

Part II: The Milled Series

By Mary Ann Bacher

In terms of antiquity, scope and artistic merit, the coinage of few countries can match that of England. Most English coin collectors start by concentrating on coins of fairly recent vintage, and then expand their horizons. Some turn their attention to Commonwealth coins or tokens, while others move back over the centuries to the early milled series or the earlier hammered series. In the last issue of New England World Selections, we reviewed the English hammered series (coins issued before 1662). In this issue, we turn our attention to the milled series (1662 to present).

Collectors refer to all English coins struck by machinery as "milled." This term was originally applied to coins made at the Paris mint circa 1552. The metal for these coins was rolled to the desired thickness, a cutting press stamped out blanks, and a screw press was used to strike the coins. Parts of the machinery were powered by water or horse mills. Thus, the name "mill money." Technically and artistically, these coins were superior to hammered coins. Unfortunately, attempts to introduce machinery for striking coins failed to take hold in 16th Century England due to bitter opposition from mint workers who feared for their jobs. It wasn't until the middle of the next century that hand hammered coins were finally abandoned in favor of machine striking by the improved mill and screw presses.

Coinage of the Stuart Line (1660-1688)

At the commencement of the reign of Charles II (1660-1685), John and Joseph Roettier, two brothers whose family had served Charles during his exile, were appointed engravers and were asked to prepare dies for the new "milled" coinage. The first milled halfcrowns and shillings were issued in 1663; the dated twopence in 1668; the dated fourpence, threepence and penny in 1670; and the sixpence in 1674. The four major silver denominations have four shields of arms in the form of a cross on their reverse, while the four minor denominations have one to four C's representing their values. The crown and halfcrown have an inscribed edge followed by the monarch's regnal year, which was reckoned from the death of Charles I. This practice was continued on the crown until 1935, and on the halfcrown until the end of the reign of George II. The custom of marking some of the coins with a "provenance" symbol to denote the source of their metal was also extended during this reign. For instance, a rose was marked on silver from mines in the West of England; plumes were marked on silver from the mines of Wales. Little of importance occurred during the reign of Charles II's successor, James II (1685-1688). The basic reverse designs remained unchanged; and the dies were again engraved by Roettier.

Coinage of the House of Orange

The coins of the joint reign of William III and Mary II (1689-1694) are interesting in that conjoined portraits of the two sovereigns are portrayed on the coinage for the only time in the English series. For the first two years of the reign, apart from Maundy money, only halfcrowns were struck. After 1690, crowns, halfcrowns, shillings and sixpence were struck. In 1695, after the death of Mary, the government decided on a complete recoinage. Up to this date the worn and badly clipped hammered money was still in use. These coins were accepted at their face value, regardless of weight, so the government and not the owner sustained the loss. The famous "window" tax on dwellings was levied to raise money to make up for this loss and to pay for the new coinage. The London mint could not cope with this huge job, so branch mints operated at Bristol, Chester, Exeter, Norwich, and York, where halfcrowns, shillings and sixpence dated 1696-1697 were issued. There were millions of coins struck during William III's reign (1694-1702), and today several of the pieces are relatively common.

Coinage of the Stuart Line (1702-1714)

The major point of interest in Queen Anne's reign (1702-1714) was the Act of Union passed in 1707, which united the parliaments of England and Scotland. This act required a change in the way the Royal Arms were portrayed on coinage. (Prior to 1707, the Scottish and English Arms are shown on separate shields, but after the Union, they are shown side by side in two of the large shields on the reverse of the four major silver denominations.) It became the task of the Edinburgh mint to call in and convert into United Kingdom coins all old Scottish money, which had previously been very separate from that of England. (Scottish denominations were equivalent to only 1/12th of the English.)

Coinage of the House of Hanover

After the death of Anne, the accession of the House of Hanover resulted in changes in George I's style and titles, and the inclusion of the Arms of Brunswick-Luneburg-Hanover in the shields on the reverse of the larger silver coins. There are few differences in portraiture, however, during George I's reign (1714-1727), apart from two different busts on the shilling, showing a variation in the tie behind the King's hair. No great changes were made in the coinage of George I's successor, George II (1727-1760). Silver coins from 1728 to 1741 show the so-called Young Head. This was replaced in 1743 on the four larger coins by the Old Head, while the four smaller pieces retained the Young Head throughout the reign. Some coins dated 1745 and 1746 bear the word "LIMA" under the King's bust to indicate that the silver was captured from Spanish privateers during Anson's voyage around the world (1739-1743).

The long reign of George II (1760-1820) is interesting historically and numismatically. Late in the century, the Napoleonic Wars caused the price of silver to escalate sharply. As a result, it became unprofitable to issue large silver coins, and Spanish dollars were counter-stamped with George III's head, and proclaimed legal tender at 4/9d. They were not successful, being widely counterfeited, and were replaced by emergency coinage of the Bank of England, consisting of 5 shilling dollars, 3 shillings, and 18 pence tokens. These did not contain their face value in metal, and were a precursor of the first true "reform" coinage issued in 1816. Halfcrowns, shillings and sixpence were struck that year, Maundy in 1817, and the crown in 1818-1820. These silver issues are of reduced size and weight, being 66 shillings instead of 62 to the pound troy. This size and weight continued until the decimalization of the coinage in 1971.

On the crown and larger gold denominations of George III, we find the St. George and the dragon device for the first time since the reign of Elizabeth I. The head of the halfcrown was changed in 1817, as the original design, known as the Bull Head, bears an unattractive portrait of the King. The artist responsible for both of these designs was Benedetto Pistrucci, an Italian gem-engraver. Pistrucci and his assistant, Jean Baptiste Merlen, were together responsible for much of the coinage of George IV's reign (1820-1830).

As might be expected of the longest reign in English history, there were many alterations to the coinage of Queen Victoria (1837-1901). The coinage falls broadly into three issues: Young Head (from the start of the reign to about 1887); the Jubilee Head (from 1887-1893); and the Old Head (from 1893 onwards). The Young Head issue was designed by William Wyon. Crowns for circulation were only made in 1844, 1845, and 1847, and there was a gap between 1850 and 1874 in the issue of halfcrowns. This was due to the introduction of the florin, or two shilling piece, in 1849. There had been considerable pressure to change to a decimal currency early in the reign, and as a "first step" a piece valued at 1/10th of a pound, or two shillings, was struck. This was known as the "Godless" florin because the inscription "Dei Gratia" (By the Grace of God) — were omitted. The omission caused a near scandal, and the coin was soon replaced by a slightly broader coin, with the inscriptions and dates in Gothic script. These coins are known as "Gothic" florins.

In 1887, the design on the coins was changed to celebrate Queen Victoria's fiftieth year of reign. The well-known Jubilee type head was engraved by L.C. Wyon, son of William Wyon, from designs by Sir J. Boehm. An innovation in this coinage was the issue of a double florin, or four shilling piece, which did not prove popular, probably because it was easily mistaken for the crown, and it was abandoned in 1890. The generally unpopular Jubilee Head was replaced in 1893 by the Old or Veiled Head designed by G. de Saulles, who also designed the obverse portrait on the coinage of Victoria's successor, Edward VII (1901-1910). The florin of Edward VII's reign is notable in that it shows a standing figure of Britannia. It was also during this reign that a reducing machine was first used to produce the master punches from the plaster designs.

Coinage of the House of Windsor

The coinage of George V (1910-1936) is usually considered to fall into four issues. The first two issues were almost identical apart from fineness (the second issue was struck in metal of which 50% was silver and 50% alloy). The rise in silver prices following World War I had made it possible to melt ordinary coinage and make a profit on it. In 1920, therefore, it was decided to debase the silver coinage for the first time since the reign of Edward VI. It was an unfortunate decision as the price of silver soon dropped below the danger point. The third coinage is basically similar, but a new portrait, known as the "modified effigy," was used and florins were not issued. In 1935, on the occasion of George V's Silver Jubilee, a special crown was struck, with a modernistic St. George reverse designed by Percy Metcalfe. Twenty-five special Jubilee crowns were struck in gold and 2,500 were struck in sterling silver. They were allotted to collectors by ballot. The pieces have an edge inscription in relief whereas the normal coins have an incuse inscription.

In 1937, the year George VI (1936-1952) was coronated, all denominations were struck with new designs. Shillings were issued with two reverse designs, one bearing the crest of the English and the other the crest of the Scottish version of the Royal Arms. The other change was the issue of a new 12-sided nickel-brass threepenny piece in addition to the small silver coin. In 1947, a revolutionary change in English coinage took place when silver coins ceased to be issued and were replaced by cupro-nickel coins. The designs were not changed, but the milling on the edge was made much closer. This change of metal was made in order to repay silver borrowed during World War II from the United States. In 1947, India became independent, and from 1949, George V relinquished his title of "Ind Imp" (Emperor of India). This did not require major changes in coin design apart from re-spacing of words. On the occasion of the National Exhibition in 1951, a special cupro-nickel crown was issued. The reverse shows Pistrucci's famous St. George design. Over 2 million of these coins were struck from polished dies and issued in special boxes.

The present Queen, Elizabeth II, ascended to the throne in February of 1952 on the death of George VI. The normal practice being followed, no coins bearing her portrait were issued until the time of her coronation in June of 1953. The only unusual design feature on the new coinage was the equestrian figure for the crown, and this was the first such representation since the reign of Charles I. The reverse is also unusual in that it bears no legend. In 1954, the Queen declared by proclamation that the title "Britt: Omn" (of all the Britains) was no longer in keeping with the status of the British Commonwealth, and the words were omitted from that year onward.

Owing to inflation, the farthing became practically valueless and its production ceased after 1956. These coins were then demonetized in 1960. In 1965 it was decided to change to a decimal system of coinage beginning in 1971. As part of the transition, the halfpenny was demonetized in 1969 and the halfcrown in 1970. Although the official change to a decimal coinage did not take place until February 15, 1971, three decimal denominations were circulated prior to that date. The 10 and 5 new pence, equivalent to the former florin and shilling, were introduced in 1968 and the seven-sided 50 new pence (equal to 10 shillings) was issued in 1969. In 1968, bronze 2, 1, and ½ new pence dated 1971 were issued, together with the 1968 10 and 5 new pence, as specimens of the new coinage, but the bronze coins were not legalized until 1971.

World Coin Commentary

By Frank L. Garofalo

Director, Ancient & World Coin Division

Signs of the growing interest in world coinage among collectors continued to spring up everywhere throughout the months of September and October. In the past few weeks, auction activity in London has been high, and at the long-awaited COINEX-80 Show (held September 26-27 at the Europa Hotel in London), many price records were established.

Among the items showing the greatest amount of activity were, generally, Mint State coinage of virtually all types and English Maundy Sets. Also highly prized are quality specimens of English hammered coinage. In fact, we witnessed an interesting occurrence in this field at a recent European show. An Elizabeth I Gold Sovereign traded hands, first for $24,000, then for $26,500 minutes later, and finally, in less than 24 hours, was again resold for $36,000! This is quite remarkable in that, less than one year ago, the original owner of this coin could not find a buyer at $15,000!

A third area of fierce trading in the past weeks has been 19th century Greek and Russian coinage. Both collectors and dealers who, in the past, have ignored this area, are awakening to the fact that, in spite of relatively large initial mintages, Mint State and Proof coins of these series are quite rare. This fact, combined with the growth in the number of collectors entering the world coin market in general, seem to spell good news for the futures of high-grade 19th century Greek and Russian coinage.

One of the main contributors to the recent growth in the world coin market seems to be the publication of many new books on the subject. Probably chief among these is the Standard Catalog of World Coins released by Krause Publications. This one-volume library with its thousands of prices and mintage figures has removed much of the mystery from collecting world coins, and has opened the doors for many new collectors.

Another important new publication in the offing is a world coin version of Coin Dealer Newsletter (or, as it is more commonly called, "The Gray Sheet"). Reportedly, the sole aim of this new publication will be to recap and summarize important trends in the world coin market. We look forward eagerly to such a publication, as it will simplify, for collectors and dealers alike, the act of making informed buying and selling decisions on world coinage.

Glossary of English Numismatic Terms (Part II: English Milled Coinage)

English numismatic terms used in the pages of New England World Selections are defined below. For a brief history of English milled coinage, see this month's feature article.

Boulton, Mathew. Founded the Soho Mint of Birmingham in 1762. Struck English Cartwheel coinage.

Britt. An abbreviation of "Britanniarums." Refers to any land, colony or foreign possession of Great Britain.

Bun. Popular term for Victorian pennies minted between 1860 and 1894. Victoria's portrait on these coins sported a "bun" of hair.

Cartwheel. A reference to English copper coinage of 1797, so-called because of its large diameter.

Clipping. Shaving of metal from the rim of coinage.

Cupro-nickel. A 75%/25% alloy of copper and nickel.

EIC. A reference to the East India Company. Such references appear on the gold coinage of George II. Gold for these coins was imported to England on the company's ships.

Elephant & Castle. Provenance mark of the African Company appearing on the coins of Charles II and George I. Prior to 1675, this mark featured the Elephant without Castle.

Jugate. Coinage with designs having two or more heads overlapping.

Maundy. A set of four silver pieces — fourpence, threepence, twopence and a penny — traditionally given to the poor on Maundy Thursday by the king.

Milled. Coins minted by the screw press method. (Not to be confused with "millling.")

Milling. The graining around the edge of silver and gold English coinage.

Plugged Money. The half-pennies and tin farthings of Charles II and James II. These coins were plugged with copper to prevent counterfeiting.

Plume. A provenance mark indicating coinage minted from metal taken from Welsh mines.

Provenance Mark. Word or symbol indicating where the metal of a coin originated.

Rose. Provenance mark of the English mines.

Roses and Plumes. Provenance marks of the English and Welsh mines.

SSC. Provenance mark of metal imported from Peru by the South Sea Company. Seen on the silver coinage of George I.

Token Coinage. Coins whose intrinsic value does not equal their official denomination.

Vigo. Provenance mark of the Vigo Bay treasure, captured and brought to England by Admiral Sir George Rooke in 1702. Seen on the silver coinage of Anne.

VOC. A reference to the "Vereenigde Oostindische Compagnie" or the United East India Company.

WCC. Provenance mark of the Welsh Copper Company. Seen on the coins of George I.

Wire Money. The Maundy sets of 1792. So-called because of their thin numerals.

Our Complete Numismatic Services

1. Guarantees

Grading

We guarantee that coins purchased from us are graded correctly and will meet our high standards when you wish to sell them. Further, we guarantee to purchase these coins at the same grade at which they were sold, or sell them for you at auction cataloged at the same grade at which you purchased them.

Our grading system is patterned after that of the American Numismatic Association. Developed in 1978, the A.N.A. System is used extensively throughout the professional numismatic community. Its designations are:

|                          |                         |
|--------------------------|-------------------------|
| Poor .....               | 1                       |
| Fair .....               | 2                       |
| About Good .....         | 3                       |
| Good .....               | 4.5                     |
| Very Good .....          | 8,10                    |
| Fine .....               | 12,15                   |
| Very Fine .....          | 20,25,30,35             |
| Extremely Fine .....     | 40,45                   |
| About Uncirculated ..... | 50,55,58                |
| Mint State .....         | 60,63,64,65,66,67,69,70 |
| Proof .....              | 60,63,65,67,69,70       |

Slash grades indicate obverse/reverse designations. For example, a grade of 65/63 describes a coin with an obverse of Mint State 65 and a reverse of Mint State 63.

Authenticity

We further guarantee that all coins sold by New England Rare Coin Galleries are authentic. To protect our customers, and as proof of our certainty that no altered or counterfeit coin can escape our attention, we guarantee to refund the full purchase price plus 15% compound annual interest, on any non-authentic coin acquired from us.

Documentation

These guarantees are issued in writing with all coins purchased from New England Rare Coin Galleries. Each written guarantee is personally endorsed by two professional numismatists.

Satisfaction

If, for any reason, you are not satisfied with your purchases, you may return them within 45 days of the date you received them for a full refund or replacement.

2. Expert Counseling

Use New England's toll-free number to consult with some of the most knowledgeable numismatists in America. Our expert staff is often sought by government agencies, museums and other coin dealers for advice on authenticity and value. We supply free information on placing coins in retirement plans, building rare coin portfolios and liquidating collections.

3. Selection

New England's multi-million-dollar inventory includes the finest ancient and world coinage on today's market. In addition, New England offers the world's largest selection of rare U.S. coinage, and a choice selection of U.S. Currency, in its monthly catalog, Inventory Selections. A sample copy of Inventory Selections can be obtained for $1 from New England Rare Coin Galleries.

4. Want Lists

Send your Want List to your New England account executive. He'll use our computerized facilities to help you locate any coin you desire. There is no charge for this service, and you are under no obligation to buy. You will, however, have the first opportunity to purchase each coin on your list that we locate.

5. Personal Service Cards

Call your New England Professional Numismatist and apply for a New England Personal Service Card. It costs you nothing. And it entitles you to:

Approval Account Service, whereby you can personally examine coins before you purchase them ($100 minimum order).

Deferred Payment Service, which makes financing your rare coin purchases easy: 25% down, 25% each 30 days for a maximum of 90 days, and absolutely no interest charges! $500 is the minimum order allowed under this service.

6. Auctions

If you have high-quality coins to sell, contact New England Rare Coin Auctions first. Selling at auction is often the best way to receive top dollar for your coins. And New England has conducted some of the numismatic world's finest auctions, including the prestigious Metropolitan New York Auction and the annual auction of the American Numismatic Association. Our toll-free "Auction Line" number is: 800-225-6794, Extension #99.

7. Purchasing

If you prefer to sell your coins directly, send them insured and by registered mail to New England. We'll reimburse you for postage costs. Or call for more information. Our buying prices are the highest in the industry.

8. Brochures

New England has several informational brochures which we'll be happy to send to you free upon request. They include:

- Rare Coins: The Valuable Asset
- Questions & Answers on Consigning to Auction
- Coins & Keoghs
- When You're Ready to Sell Your Rare Coins

9. Toll-free Wats Line

Contacting New England is free. Use our toll-free WATS line: 1-800-225-6794 (in Massachusetts, please call: 617-227-8800). We'll be happy to assist you in any way we can.
